Objective of this fact-sheet is to explain how Jumbo codifies added value offers in order to interpret this kind of product through our xml interface and cache files.

CONCEPT

These offers have been defined to qualify added value services or products for the hotel reservation.

APPLICATION DOMAIN

This feature applies to any agencies.

REQUIREMENTS

The usage of these offers is indeed optional, but if you choose to use, it will require an interpretation from the offers node, and subsequent offerDescription tag which is included in our responses, valuate and confirm responses.

WEB SERVICES OPERATIONS:

Usage: We use the first word of the offerDescription tag to identify this kind of offers. Find below agreed codes which will be used to describe added value offers:

- English: Package - Deutsch : Paket - Spanish: Paquete
- French: Forfait - Italian: Pacchetto - Portuguese: Paquete

In order to manage these offers, a simple process would detect them from first word from "offerDescription" section / attributes and point it out on your response platform.

The below example show in our xml response an excerpt of it: (nodo <roomPrices>)

< offerDescription >

< description > Package Disney: Entrance Tickets 2 Parks (valid over length of stay in the Disneyland and Walt Disney Studio Park) < / description >

< / offerDescription >

CACHE FILES CODIFICATION (FOR CACHE CLIENTS ONLY)

The same information is available in our contracts files (daily cache). You can retrieve it in the offers section of contracts: We use the same logic:

- English: Package - Deutsch : Paket - Spanish: Paquete
- French: Forfait - Italian: Pacchetto - Portuguese: Paquete

In the below example, you can retrieve the same added value offer as mentioned previously:
